HOW TO SCORE A BASE BALL GAME

The pleasure of witnessing a ball game is greatly increased if the spectator is able to keep a clean and accurate score, noting every play that is made. There are numerous systems of scoring, but the following is the simplest and most convenient.

The basis of all scoring rests on the numbering of the players to correspond with their positions on the field. This can be done in any way that suits the individual scorer, but the ordinary method is to begin with the pitcher, thus: Pitcher, 1; catcher, 2; first baseman, 3; second baseman, 4; third baseman, 5; shortstop, 6; left fielder, 7; center fielder, 8; right fielder, 9. All fielding plays are recorded by the use of these numbers.

Other symbols are used for the plays made by the side at bat. The most common are as follows: A single base hit is designated by a straight horizontal line —; for a two-bagger, make one vertical mark through this line, +; a three-bagger, two vertical marks, ++; and a homerun, three vertical marks, +++; a strike-out is indicated by the letter K; a stolen base by S; a base on balls by B; a hit by pitched ball by H; a wild pitch by W; a passed ball by P; a balk by Bk.

Opposite each player's name in the batting order will be found a series of square spaces, one for each inning of the game. Each of these squares are divided into five sections. The center section is used to denote what finally becomes of the batter—that is, whether he finally goes out, scores a run, or is left on base. The other four sections are used to show how the batter works his way around the bases. In the lower right-hand corner, note how he gets to first base, or how he is put out before reaching that point. In the upper right-hand corners how he gets to second, in the upper left-hand corner how he gets to third, and in the lower left-hand corner how he reaches home, if he gets that far.

Here is an example of how a batter's work is scored, taken from a game played by the Reds with St. Louis three years ago:

	Pos	1	2	3	4	5
Roush	8	—	—+ B	—S —	—+ —B	—K

As Roush played center-field, his number was 8, which is put down after his name in the batting order. In the first inning he did not come to bat, so the space opposite his name for that inning is left blank. In the second inning he reached first base on four balls, which is designated by the letter B in the lower right-hand corner of the space reserved for the second inning. The next man up made a long hit on which Roush came all the way home from first. This is indicated by the mark of a three-bagger in the upper right-hand corner, showing that he not only reached second on the hit, but also made two additional bases. The run scored by him is indicated by a dot in the center section of the square. In the third inning he came to bat again, reached first base on a single, shown by a horizontal line in the lower right-hand corner, stole second, shown by a letter S in the upper right-hand corner, and was left on second when the side was out, shown by the small letter B in the center of the square.

A run should always be indicated by a dot, left on base by one of the letters

Continued

A, B or C, indicating what base he was left on, and an out by the figure 1, 2 or 3, indicating that he was the first, second or third out in the inning.

In the fourth inning Roush came to bat again, drew a base on balls, reached second on a sacrifice hit by the succeeding batter, which is indicated by a horizontal line in the upper right-hand corner, and came home on a base hit by the next batter, which is shown by the mark of a two-bagger in the upper left-hand corner. The run scored is shown by the dot in the center of the square.

In the fifth inning, Roush came to bat again, and this time he struck out, indicated by the letter K in the lower right-hand corner. He was the third man out, which is shown by the figure 3 in the center of the square.

Put-outs, assists and errors are indicated by the use of the numbers corresponding to the fielders who make the plays. Here is an illustration taken from a game played by the Reds with Philadelphia on June 19, 1909:

	Pos	1	2	3	4	5
Cobb	7	—	—	— ²⁴ —	—	— ₉

Cobb in the first inning knocked a grounder to the second baseman and was thrown out at first, indicated by the figures 43 in the lower right-hand corner, meaning that player 4 (that is, the second baseman) got an assist on the play, and player 3 (the first baseman) made the put-out. As he was the first man out in the inning, the fact is shown by the figure 1 in the center of the square.

In the third inning Cobb singled, but was thrown out by the catcher in an attempt to steal second, indicated by the figures 24 in the upper right-hand corner, meaning that player 2, the catcher, got an assist, and player 4, the second baseman, handled the throw and made the put-out. It was the third out, which is shown by the figure 3 in the center of the square.

In the fifth inning Cobb was the first man out, retiring on a fly to the right fielder, which is shown by the figure 9 in the lower right-hand corner.

An error is noted by the letter E, preceding the number of the player erring; for instance, when a batter reaches first base on a fumble by the short-stop, show it thus, E6, in the lower right-hand corner. If the first baseman drops a good throw from the shortstop, it is shown like this, 6E3, indicating that the shortstop gets an assist and the first baseman an error.

When a batter forces another at second, and is safe himself, it is shown by the use of the letters FC in the lower right-hand corner opposite his name, showing that he reached first base on a fielder's choice, which means that the fielder chose to retire the advanced runner, rather than the batter.

To indicate a double play, draw a line connecting the squares of the two players who are retired on the play.

If the scorer wishes to keep a full score for future reference, he should do so by the use of dots under proper headings, as follows:

PO A E Daubert No. AB R H SH SB

It is a very easy matter to fill in with the figures as soon as the game is over, and the result will be a complete and accurate detailed score of the game.
